About Dave

David McCauley Stryker Jr. may have carried no official or professional title, but for many in Greater Boston and beyond, he was unquestionably King of the May -- at least, of the annual May Day celebration that has been held in Cambridge, Mass., on the banks of the Charles River every May 1 for the past three decades. Dave Stryker died a little more than a month after May Day, on June 6, 2007, having battled cancer for the last year and a half.

Dave was a man who was truly larger than life. Dave’s singular dancing and personality were well known throughout the US, Canada and UK. Dave danced and played officially on at least 5 teams and unofficially on many more. He toured England numerous times, both with teams and solo, because he loved to study Morris dance and music at its source. He played numerous instruments of Morris, including: fiddle, accordion, concertina, banjo and guitar.
